QUEER CASE OF FATAL BENDS.

TUNNEL LABORER TAKES FOUR AMBULANCE TRIPS TO DIE.

Bellevue Doctors and Emergency Hospital Staff Have Disagreement Over Patient and Cop Is Called to Get Him Above Ground-Coroner Did Not Act

An ambulance call from the Belmont tunnel at Forty-second street and the East River came into Bellevue Hospital a little after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Dr. logers went with the wagon and brought Sack James Kelly, a laborer, 51 years old and living at 344 First avenue. Kelly was in a very bad way with the "bends," as the caisson workers call the peculiar and characteristic muscular affection of tunnel His condition was serious enough for Dr. Rogers to give him close attention when he arrived at the hospital.

Along in the morning Dr. Rogers got a telephone call from some one who said he was the superintendent of the section of the tunnel on which Kelly was employed. This man told Dr. Rogers that he would like to have Kelly sent back, as there was an emergency hospital attached to the tunnel, where the man could be properly attended to and from which he would be sent home if his condition warranted that.

Dr. Rogers consented to turn the man over to the Emergency Hospital on receiving assurances that every possible medical attention would be given to him. So the wagon was sent on this errand and Dr. Rogers saw that there were physicians Rogers saw that there were physicians and nurses on hand in the Emergency Hospital to look after Kelly.

About half-past four yesterday afternoon another call came in from the tunnel. Dr. Lindsay went out this time, having relieved Dr. Rogers. Lindsay found a corps of doctors and nurses at work over a nude man who was unconscious. They told the ambulance doctor that the man had been found outside, near the tunnel, in a helpless condition. He was dead drunk, they said, and they had decided that it would be an act of kindness to revive him. They added that he was not employed in the tunnel.

Dr. Lindsay examined the man closely and then turned to the tunnel medical staff, saying:

and then turned to the tunnel medical staff, saying:

"That man's not drunk. He's dying of the bends. And, what's more, he's the same man that we had in the hospital this morning, and whom your superintendent promised would be taken care of. I'd like to know how he got in this condition."

The tunnel staff protested that Dr. Lindsay was mistaken, but he insisted that he recognized the man and intended to take him to Bellevue. There was immediate opposition to this proposition, the tunnel people declaring that they would not let the man go and that they were perfectly competent to look after him.

"Is that so?" asked Lindsay. "All I've got to say to that is that I'm going to remove this man, who seems to be dying to Bellevue, where he'll be properly cared for; and that if necessary I'll call on the whole police force of New York to help me."

me."
It only took one cop to persuade the tunnel men that Dr. Lindsay meant what he said, and then the ambulance hustled back to Bellevue with its dying passenger. As soon as he got back Dr. Lindsay notified the Coroner's office, and asked that somebody be sent up to Bellevue with authority to take down an ante-mortem statement. That was a little after 5 o'clock, but when Kelly died, three hours and a half later, no Coroner or anybody representing one had called at Bellevue.

The tunnel people have no explanation of the man's second attack.

TO HASTEN GILLETTE'S TRIAL.

District Attorney to Apply for an Extraordinary Session of the Grand Jury.

UTICA. July 19.-District Attorney Ward of Herkimer county said this afternoon that he had decided to make application to Gov. Higgins for an extraordinary session of the grand jury for the purpose of considering the charge against Chester Gillette of Cortland, who is held for the murder at Big Moose, in the Adirondacks, of for an extraordinary term is found in the fact that many very important witnesses are now temporary visitors in the Adirondacks. They are located and on hand for the present, but before the season ends will the present, but before the season ends will have scattered far and wide, and to chase them up will mean additional cost, and then there is the probability of some one getting out of reach of the law.

District Attorney Ward also thinks that the case is of such an atrocious nature that it should be brought to immediate trial. An effort will be made on the trial to show that Gillette attempted to take the life of Grace Brown before the girl left Cortland to visit her home at South Otselic, a month previous to her murder.

It is reported that Gillette was engaged to marry a prominent society woman of Cortland, the daughter of a leading lawyer of that city. The young woman's partents have informed the Herkimer county au-thorities, however, that while Gillette and their daughter were very close friends they are doubtful if an engagement to marry

PEANUT FOR THE ALLIGATOR And Smelling Salts for the Sunstruck Horse

-Bronx Contributes These Tales. Summer tales came out of The Brons yesterday. Mr. Frederick Schaefer of Sixth avenue went to the Zoo and offered a pean ut to an alligator. The alligator, who was not born yesterday, but, on the contrary, has a long record of cats and dogs, lazily took in Mr. Schaefer with a glance and then took in Mr. Schaefer's hand. Mr. Schaefer screamed and two keepers, Synder and Dillon, punched the alligator's snout with iron prongs until he let go. Dr. Gilbert Vandersmissen cauterized and bandaged Schaefer's hand.

Another Bronx tale runs in this wise The American Express Company owns a dear old bay mare named "No. 922." It was very hot in the Bronx yesterday and No. 922's bonnet was old and porous. She staggered and fell across the tracks of the Union Railway Company at 138th street and Third avenue. Third avenue.

Third avenue.

Two women descended from a stalled car and one of them pressed a bottle of violet smelling salts on Mr. Hargar, the driver.

Doubting even as he did it, Mr. Hargar took the bottle and removing the stopple slipped it out of sight up No. 922's left nostril. The two stylishly dressed women held hands in a memory's argany of supports thin. The two stylishly diessed women held hands in a moment's agony of suspense. Then No. 922 sighed and languidly opened one eye in mute questioning as if she would ask. "Is my hat on straight?" She sighed again, and with some help got up and was sele to go home.

Ex-Convict Caught With $150 Worth of Loot in His Possession.

Edward Andrews, alias Edward Anderson, 31 years old, who says he has no home, was arraigned yesterday in the Myrtle was arraigned yesterday in the Myrtle avenue court, Brooklyn, for burglary, and held for the Grand Jury in default of $10,000 bail. He broke into the house of Mrs. W. G. Erickson at 41 Greene avenue on Wednesday, and was captured with $150 worth of loot in his possession after a chase over the roofs of the adjoining houses. He is an ex-convict, having served a five years' term in Sing Sing for burglary.

Family's Home Blown Up With Dynamite. WILKESBARRE, July 19 .- An attempt was made this morning at Avoca to kill A. G. MRS. J. SAMUEL PIZA DEAD.

New York Woman Whe Leaped From Boston Hotel Window Dies of Wounds. Boston, July 19.-Mrs. J. Samuel Piza of New York, who attempted suicide at the Hotel Touraine just before midnight, died at the City Hospital at 5:40 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Piza leaped from the fifth floor of the hotel. Her body struck an iron guide to a flagpole and then crashed into and partly through the glass and steel portico that shelters the main entrance. One arm and one leg were nearly severed by the glass and Mrs. Piza was barely alive when she reached the hospital. There was much delay in removing the body from the wreck of the portico, so tightly was it jammed into the

As the ambulance was leaving the hotel Mr. Piza, whom his wife had left in their room when she went into the hall and stepped to the window to her death, came out of the hotel, begging for the ambulance to wait for him. When his wife had risen from bed he did not suspect her intent, but as she did not return he stepped into the hall, where he saw the opened window and her slippers where she had placed them.

Mrs. Pizz had suffered from a nervous ffliction, and a few weeks ago he brought her to the New England Sanitarium at Melher to the New England Sanitarium at Melrose. Yesterday Mr. Piza came to take her home. A favorable report had been made on her case. They left the sanitarium late in the afternoon and about 8 o'clock went to the Touraine. Mrs. Piza appeared cheerful, and her husband was encouraged by her spirits. It was after 11 o'clock when they went to bed. After some minutes Mr.
Piza heard his wife get up, but thought nothing of it at first. As the minutes went by and she did not come back he became anxious and went into the hallway, where he found the window open.

Mrs. J. Samuel Piza was about 30 years old. She was the eldest daughter of Joshua J. Lindo, an importer and commission merchant of 18 Broadway. Her brother, Oswald J. Lindo, went to Boston yesterday on receipt of the despatch announcing her death

HARMONY IN HIBERNIAN ORDER.

Not an Appeal Made to the National Organization During the Year. SARATOGA, July 19 .- In the national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians o-day the committee on appeals and grieva ances for the first time in the history of the order was able to report that not an appeal had been made and that harmony prevailed in Hibernian circles throughout the United States. The report was received with vociferous applause.

The better portion of the day was devoted o the consideration of reports, many of which will be submitted for action tomorrow. The committee on delegates reported 405 seated in the national conven-

SNEERED AT THE BLACK HAND.

Reason Given for the Assassination of an Italian in West New Rochelle.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 19.- Because ne spoke sneeringly of the Black Hand Society, Donatta Zarrillo, an Italian living in West New Rochelle, was shot and killed in the street early this morning by two bandits, who also fired on his brother Tomasso, and left him for dead. Tomasso was taken to the New Rochelle hospital. The assassins fled to the woods and have not been captured, although the police of three cities have been looking for them all day.

The murdered man was a laborer. About a month ago, while he was in a saloon drinking, the subject of the Black Hand Society came up, and he flourished a revolver and remarked that the members of the society were a lot of cowards and that he would kill then if they attempted to lay an average. kill them if they attempted to levy an assess-ment on him. His remarks were taken up by two unknown Italians and a fight was act if they were to act before the fival society raised contributions. The image was picked up unexpectedly by some men on the morning of last Tuesday and carried to the store of the undertakers Vecchis & Tharesco, at 33 James street, two blocks away, to be kept. The news spread rapidly from door to door. To the ordinary worshippers it meant that sacrilege had been committed. San Rocco is reputed a potent defender from sickness. The affront seemed to the mothers of the Italian families to have

That the San Rocco of the Church of San Gioachimo of Roosevelt street stood once more yesterday in its traditional place beside the high altar is due partly to the devotion of the members of the Confraternita di San Rocco, but above all to the help of his women worshippers. The saint was bought with the proceeds of a popular subscription eighteen years ago, so that the Italians felt from the start that he was the representative of all of them. As a good many years passed the saint grew in repute and sanctity. His feast day grew to be sumptuously celebrated with processions, fireworks and street long illuminations on the night of August 16.

The Italian worshippers of San Gioacchimo number, all told, more than 20,000. As the feast day in August drew near all devout Italians slipped their silver into the saint's contribution box, to go to the cost of the feast. A society was organized to keep the moneys and provide the festal displays. It was called the Societá Mutuo Succores di San Rocco, and it, the other parishioners ay, caused all the trouble.

There grew to be some dissatisfaction with the society and the parishioners a year or more ago organized a new body with a different name, to supplant it, the Confraternita di San Rocco, alt is the proper to the San Rocco, and it, the other parishioners ayear or more ago organized as new body with a different name, to supplant it, the Confraternita di San Rocco, and they reasoned that if they were the original society charged with the saint's keeping the saint therefore belonged to them, and so if they were supersed they would take the image with them. As the month of the saint's day began to draw near they saw it was time to distinct the saint's keeping the saint therefore belonged to them, and so if they were supersed they would take the image with them.

kitchens slipped up their sleeves, as the men who started to move the saint soon discovered. There was no struggle and the knives were not used. But, as the story is told in James street, they saved the image from being carried off.

The women stayed around the undertaker's store until another crowd came on the scene, headed by four policemen and Marshal Freeman, with a warrant to take the saint back to his proper place. Then there was a rush into the little shop, which was packed so tightly that the women could not kneel to pray to the recovered saint, though all wished to. He was picked up and borne out by the women with the knives in their sleeves. Through a surging crowd of women and children he was carried, with never a jolt or mishap; up Roosevelt street, up the steep church stairs, jest the other images of Mary, Jesus and John the Britist, and at last lifted into his own place, where he is now. Many candles were set about the hem of his garment and kept the church bright ail day long.
